A cDNA was isolated from a human thyroid cDNA library that encoded a protein with an amino-terminal region similar to the amino-terminal region of bovine and yeast inositol-6-phosphate synthase. The first 34 amino acids of this human protein corresponded to 22 amino acids of the known amino terminus of yeast protein. Comparison of this region to the amino acids of bovine protein established that the human protein shared 98% amino acid identity with the bovine protein. The human and yeast proteins shared 82% amino acid identity. The small regions of amino acid identity suggested the possibility of structural homology between the two proteins. A genomic library was constructed from human genomic DNA, and a probe derived from the human cDNA was used to screen the library. A large fragment of genomic DNA was isolated that contained the entire coding region of the gene. Analysis of the gene sequence showed that the gene contained a
